2024-2025 Financial Aid Eligibility for Preparatory Coursework

Students who are not admitted to a degree-seeking program are typically not eligible to receive federal aid. However, if students are enrolled in coursework specifically to meet prerequisites for admission to a degree-seeking program, they may be considered for federal direct student loans based on undergraduate loan limits for up to 12 consecutive months.

Taking coursework to raise your GPA to be admitted does not qualify under this exception.

Section A: Academic Advisor Certification

Is the student required to take coursework to meet prerequisites for admission to a MU degree-seeking program?
Is the student taking coursework solely to raise GPA to meet admission requirements for a MU degree-seeking program?
Will the courses apply as credit towards the degree program once the student is admitted?
